A. Executive Summary

The World Health Organization (WHO) has designated the City of Waterloo as a member of the WHO Global Network of Age Friendly Cities. The WHO provides an international platform for communities to share their experiences, exchange information and provide support. The definition of an Age Friendly City is one that “encourages active ageing by optimizing opportunities for health, participation and security in order to enhance quality of life as people age”. Based on this information the WHO has described the characteristics of an Age Friendly community based on the following 8 factors or domains:

- Transportation
- Housing
- Social participation
- Respect and social inclusion
- Civic participation
- Communication and information
- Community support and health services
- Outdoor spaces and buildings

The City of Waterloo is one of only 14 cities in Canada to achieve this designation. To advance Waterloo’s Age Friendly status, City Council received an Action Plan and recommendations, from the Age Friendly Committee in June of 2013. The intent of the recommendations was to realize the Action Plan as a living document. In addition it was identified that the Corporation use the Action Plan and the report as a tool to engage community partners in the operationalization of the recommendations contained in the Council report.

The intent of the recommendations in the Age Friendly report that was presented to Council in June was to establish an Action Plan that would impact and influence our entire community. Many of the actions directly relate to groups or organizations beyond the Corporation of the City of Waterloo. The purpose of report COM2013-012 is to identify actions that directly relate to our Corporation.

To that end, Waterloo City Council embraced the Action Plan and the report with enthusiasm and support and requested that staff report back to Council on the role of the City of Waterloo as related to the Age Friendly recommendations, In the Appendix of this report, Council will be advised of the role of the city, the implementation impacts and status of the recommendations as presented.

Age Friendly Communities Recommendations COM2013-012

Age Friendly Cities (AFC) is an international movement initiated by the World Health Organization in response to global ageing and urbanization. An AFC provides a physical, social and service environment that enables older people and all ages, to live in security, enjoy good health and participate in the communities where they live, work and play.

The City of Waterloo is striving to be an increasingly Age Friendly City. With the support of the Mayor and Council, an Age Friendly Advisory committee was formed and has collaborated with the community and partners from the University of Waterloo on achieving and maintaining the status of an Age Friendly Community.

Through consultation with the community it was identified that Waterloo is

- Highly valued by its older residents
- Waterloo should address its stock of Age Friendly Housing
- Waterloo should examine and investigate opportunities for social participation and engagement
- Maintain senior independence through means of physical mobility
- Walkability is a behavioural rather than physical issue and the promotion of mobility should be strengthened.

For communities throughout Ontario, there is a growing proportion of ageing residents which presents significant opportunities as well as challenges. An ageing population is an opportunity because older adults are often committed and are long term residents of their communities, who contribute their time, energy and wealth of experience to local projects and organizations. The challenge rests in the growing observation among older people, community planners, social workers, gerontologists, health care practitioners and local policy makers that many of the communities in which we live can be difficult environments in which to age. Waterloo's population is ageing as it has been identified that our older adult population is growing in proportion with the national average. It was also identified that community planning has conventionally focused on the needs of the young and middle aged families. According to a quote from Professor Bernard Isaacs "Design for the young and you exclude the old; design for the old and you include everyone.

The City of Waterloo has been designated as an Age Friendly Community by the World Health Organization and in order to maintain this designation the Age Friendly Committee is required to report to the WHO on their efforts in developing a community that is “age friendly”. In their report to Council in June 2013 the committee identified some significant recommendations to Council on their work and communicated what dimensions that need to be developed and worked on as part of the Action Plan. This report has taken the elements of the Action Plan and proposed some timelines to bring this report to life.

In the Age Friendly report to Council in June 2013, the following dimensions were recommended to Council:

- Housing
- Health and Community Support Services
- Respect and Isolation
- Social Participation

Council received these recommendations and in order for this to be a living document, requested that staff develop an implementation and status report on how these recommendations may come to life. Appendix A in this report refers to the efforts of staff corporately it specifically includes the role that the City of Waterloo would play in this Action Plan.

Staff have consulted with the “Age Friendly Committee” on the proposed role of the City, the implementation impacts and the status of the Action Plan recommendations as outlined. The Age Friendly Committee is certainly pleased with the work that has been done so far and has supported the information contained in the Appendix of this report

This report will assist the City of Waterloo in the development of the Action Plan recommendations, and will also assist Waterloo’s Age Friendly Committee in their report to the World Health organization, and the development of future plans in Age Friendly Symposiums.

Due to the nature of the Action Plans outlined in the recommendations, staff also took into consideration the work of the Safe and Healthy Advisory Committee on the Decision Making lens in order to make Waterloo a liveable, inclusive, safe, sustainable and liveable city environment.
