The City expects that all employees will work consistently to reflect the vision, mission and guiding principles and will contribute to meeting corporate, departmental, and divisional goals and objectives. The City recognizes there will be times when fundraising is acceptable within the Code of Conduct. Examples of appropriate fundraising could include the following:

- selling tickets or issuing invitations to fundraising events organized by a charitable organization where corporate approval has been received by a director, commissioner or CAO, e.g. United Way Campaign event;
- participating in corporately sponsored events such as sports tournaments, races or other events; and,

Any gifts, payments, tickets or other items exceeding this nominal value should be returned to the sender with an acknowledgement and reference to this policy. Employees should seek guidance from their supervisor when unsure whether a gift could constitute a breach of this policy. Depending on the circumstances, it may be appropriate to forward the gift to the employee's commissioner to be made available to all department staff with an acknowledgement to the sender.

If an employee receives an invitation to attend a hospitality event that is paid for by an industry or private sector business associate, employees will be required to request approval to attend the event from their commissioner. The commissioner will determine if a conflict of interest exists or could be perceived to exist and will approve attendance or advise the employee that it is not appropriate to attend.

When a business associate pays for a meal, such that the employee will not have the opportunity to reciprocate, the employee will express concern to the business associate and advise their supervisor. When a private sector host or business partner invites an employee to participate in a meal at an event held at a City owned facility, the employee should contact their supervisor to request permission either verbally or via email prior to accepting the invitation. Permission will not typically be denied when the value of the meal is less than $50.
