A. Executive Summary

A Development Charges (DC) Background Study has been prepared to support the adoption of a new Development Charge by-law. The Background Study incorporates growth forecasts for residential and non-residential development and the infrastructure anticipated to service this growth. An industry working group was established and had the opportunity to meet with City Staff on several occasions since September of 2019 to discuss development forecasts, servicing needs, growth related capital program, etc. as part of developing the new Background Study and draft by-law. Proposed DC rates are decreasing slightly over current rates.

At the October 21, 2019 DC update meeting (report CORP2019-070), Council moved:

1. That staff be directed to develop a development charge rate structure for apartments which differentiates between units with three or fewer bedrooms and those with four or five bedrooms.
2. That staff be directed to include this rate structure in the report which will be considered by Council at the public meeting for the development charges by-law scheduled for November 18, 2019.

Staff have worked with the City's DC consulting team, Hemson Consulting Ltd., to prepare various apartment rate scenarios for Council's consideration as outlined in the Development Charge Calculation section of this report.

B. Financial Implications

Proposed Development Charge rates resulting from the October 17, 2019 Background Study are decreasing slightly over current rates. A summary of proposed DC's is provided below in Table 1 and compared to current rates for reference.

Note, small model refinements were made after the October 17 DC Background Study and draft by-law release that has reduced the non-residential rate slightly from the original value of $72.01 to $71.58 as shown in Table 1.

Development Charge By-law Update - Formal Public Meeting
CORP2019-081

Background:

Development charges (DC's) provide for the recovery of growth-related capital expenditures from new development. The DC Act is the statutory basis to recover these charges. Under the DC Act, municipalities are required to prepare a Background Study prior to the setting of new DC rates and approval of a new DC by-law. Much of the Background Study involves developing new growth forecasts and updating anticipated servicing needs/capital costs. A simplified methodology is detailed below:

- 1) Identify amount, type and location of growth;
- 2) Identify servicing needs to accommodate growth;
- 3) Identify capital costs to provide services to meet the needs;
- 4) Deduct:
 - (a) Grants, subsidies and other contributions;
 - (b) Benefit to existing development;
 - (c) Statutory 10% deduction (for discounted services);
 - (d) Amounts in excess of 10-year historic service level calculation;
 - (e) Uncommitted DC reserve funds contribution (where applicable);
- 5) Net capital costs are then allocated between residential and non-residential sectors;
- 6) Net costs are then divided by growth projections to provide the development charge per property type.

The City engaged Hemson Consulting Ltd. to support the review and development of the City's updated DC Background Study and draft by-law. Staff along with Hemson have been working to produce the updated study, which was released to the public on October 17, 2019 via the City's website at www.waterloo.ca/developmentcharges. Additionally, and as required by the DC Act, notice in a general circulation newspaper is required informing the community of the November 18, 2019 Formal Public Meeting date. Ads were posted in the October 17 & 24 editions of the Waterloo Chronicle as is done with other City notice ads.

Population & Employment Forecast:

The population and employment growth forecasts being used in the City's DC Background Study are based on the Region's "moderate forecast" which, while still aligning with the Provincial targets, achieves the targets in a manner that is more aligned with recent growth rates observed. Simply put, the moderate forecast achieves the Growth Plan's 2031 population and employment targets but 10 years later in 2041. The Region has used the moderate forecast as part of their various master plans and most recently for their DC by-law update. Furthermore, the population and employment forecast used in the transportation model for the City's Transportation Master Plan update is based on the Region's moderate growth scenario. It is thought to be the most realistic forecast to use for the DC Background Study update.

With the time horizon forecast period now extending to 2041 (vs 2031 in the last DC update), engineered (hard) services can forecast project costs out to that 2041 timeframe as permitted under the DC Act. General (soft) services are still bound by a 10 year forecast horizon to 2029.

The residential and non-residential growth forecasts used in the Background Study to identify infrastructure needs and development charge rates are as follows (note, the forecast includes permanent residents in addition to accounting for off-campus students residing in the City of Waterloo).

Table 2: Summary of Anticipated Residential and Non-residential Growth

General Service Level Caps & Capital Program:

General Services under the City's DC by-law are: Protective Services, Public Works and Fleet, Parks and Major Indoor Recreation Facilities, Parking, Cemeteries, Library Services, and Growth Studies. These services are forecasted to service growth from 2020-2029 inclusive.

Engineered Services under the City's DC by-law are: Roads & Related, Water Supply & Wastewater, Stormwater & Drainage Control, and Engineering Studies. These services are forecasted to service growth from 2020-2041 inclusive.

For most General Services, in addition to Roads and Related Services, the Development Charges Act requires that a "level of service" cap be established. This is done by establishing a 10 year service history, not only in quantity but in quality, per population and then extrapolating that figure over the anticipated future growth. These “caps” represent the maximum allowable project costs that can be incorporated into a Background Study to be recovered via DC’s. These “caps” also represent the dollar amount that would be required to be spent to maintain the current service level.

Service levels are not calculated for the engineered services of Water Supply & Wastewater and Stormwater Drainage & Control Services as new infrastructure for these services is required to meet engineering standards set by other health and environmental legislation/acts. Additionally, service levels are not calculated for Growth or Engineering Studies as there are no assets to base a service level upon.

Table 3 below outlines service level caps for the applicable services and the total proposed capital program as developed for the Background Study, including any existing reserve balances utilized. The Post Period Capacity (PPC) component is the amount of the capital program in excess of the service level cap, and is to be recovered in future DC by-law updates.

 Service level cap calculation not required for this service

The General Services DC-eligible capital budget forecast over the next 10 years (2020-2029) totals approximately $64.8M, while the DC-eligible Engineered Services capital budget forecast over the 2020-2041 period totals approximately $101.2M, in 2019 dollars.

The capital project details and associated service level caps (where relevant) have been listed within the various service sections of the Background Study in Appendix B & C. A capital project sheet summary book for both Engineered and General Services is also available at www.waterloo.ca/developmentcharges and contains a city map of the proposed development charge construction projects.

Development Charge Calculation:

The calculation for residential development charges is generated based upon six forms of housing types:

- Single and semi-detached
- Apartments with 1 bedroom or less
- Apartments with 2-3 bedrooms
- Apartments with 4 or more bedrooms
- Multiples (townhomes, row, etc.)
- Lodging house (charged on a per room basis)

The non-residential development charge has been calculated on both a per sq.m. and sq.ft. of gross floor area basis. The calculated City wide DC rates are shown in Table 4 below.

At the October 21, 2019 DC update meeting (report CORP2019-070), Council moved:

1. That staff be directed to develop a development charge rate structure for apartments which differentiates between units with three or fewer bedrooms and those with four or five bedrooms.
2. That staff be directed to include this rate structure in the report which will be considered by Council at the public meeting for the development charges by-law scheduled for November 18, 2019.

Staff have worked with Hemson Consulting Ltd. to prepare the apartment rate structure as per Council's motion (see Table 5(e) below), in addition to various other scenarios for Council's consideration as summarized in Tables 5(a) through 5(e).

Forecasted growth in apartment units is projected as a whole rather than at the unit type level (i.e. based on number of bedrooms). Unit types are only relevant when the per capita rate is translated into the per unit rate. This translation is based on recent historical persons per unit (PPU's) for the different unit types to arrive at the various different charges per unit based on number of bedrooms.

Historical PPU's for the different unit types are derived from detailed information as compiled by Hemson, along with discussions and input from City Staff.

Cash Flow:

Development charge calculations are undertaken on a cash flow basis. The calculated DC's in the above tables and scenarios are based on a cash flow summary as forecasted in the Background Study technical appendices B and C.

Some notes on the cash flow basis of determining DC rates:

- The full uncommitted DC reserve fund balances offset planned capital spending to the extent possible; negative reserve fund balances are recovered through DC collections throughout the forecast period.
- The DC is calculated so as to fully consume the reserve fund amount, leaving a zero reserve fund balance (residential and non-residential) at the end of the period in either 2029 or 2041 (depending on the service and its applicable growth forecast period).
- Existing debt payments represent debt charges resulting from external debentures previously issued to fund the growth share of infrastructure costs.
- Anticipated revenues are the estimated DC revenue the City will receive for any given year. This is calculated by taking the forecasted growth in new units for residential or forecasted gross floor area for non-residential, multiplied by the required DC per unit or per sq.ft. of non-residential floor area.

It should be noted that this cash flow method of developing DC rates assumes that the DC reserve can go into the negative, as permitted by the DC Act. Borrowing costs are built into the calculated DC rates, and Staff will manage cash flow of the DC reserves and determine if/when debenture financing may be needed in order for projects to proceed.

Policy Updates & Changes:

Staff are not proposing any significant changes to existing DC by-law policies, rather the goal is to align some of the more administrative portions of the by-law with that of the Region's DC by-law. This would provide better alignment along with ease of calculations for the development community and City staff.

Proposed policy changes to the updated DC by-law are as follows:

- Refined definitions to better align with the Region DC by-law where applicable.
- Treatment of DC's for secondary dwelling units in new construction, taking into account pending Bill 108 legislative changes. Currently, secondary dwelling units in new construction are required to pay DC's but are not required to in existing dwelling units.
- Redevelopment credits timing to align with the Region's DC by-law – up to 5 years for residential and 10 years for non-residential / mixed use (currently 6 years for all types).
- Refunds timing to align with the Region's DC by-law – increased from 1 to 7 years from the issuance of the building permit if subsequently cancelled by the Chief Building Official (CBO).
- Annual indexing timing change from Jan. 1 annually to Dec. 1.

Public Engagement & Industry Feedback:

On November 18, 2019 Council is holding a formal public meeting as required under the DC Act. Members of the general public in addition to community groups were informed of the updated DC Background study and draft by-law, with these documents being released on October 17, 2019 and November 1, 2019 respectively.

General public engagement was focused on awareness for the DC update and provided mechanisms to disseminate relevant information as it became available. This included strategies such as:

- Corporate webpage updates to include reports and presentations to Council along with a short "DC101" video.
- Notice of formal public meeting and location of the updated DC study and draft by-law documents was provided in the Waterloo Chronicle over 2 weeks in October.

As done in previous DC by-law updates, Staff have also solicited input from an external industry working group that has dialogued with Staff and the consulting team from Hemson to provide comments/feedback on the DC study update process. They had the opportunity to meet with City Staff several times over the past few months to review the growth projections and proposed capital program, as well as policy related items contained in the draft by-law. The City's external industry working group is comprised of representatives with various technical/professional backgrounds from the Waterloo Region Homebuilders Association, the Waterloo Economic Development Advisory Committee, and the KW Chamber of Commerce. The group was pleased with the engagement process and appreciative of the City's ability to answer questions in a transparent and timely manner. Their feedback thus far has been that the consultation process is positive and informative, and are supportive of the methodology to calculate draft rates.

By-law Implementation:

Staff will be returning on December 16, 2019 to have Council pass a new DC by-law and recommending that the new by-law rates take effect on December 31, 2019.

The DC eligible services are structured into two categories as shown in Schedule A of the draft by-law (i.e. discounted & non-discounted services). Two rate tables are also subsequently presented in Schedules B & C of the draft by-law corresponding to these discounted and non-discounted services. Pending anticipated revisions to the DC Act from Bill 108, the discounted services rate table would then lapse from the development charge, with the non-discounted services remaining in force until such time as the DC by-law is once again updated.

Timelines & Next Steps:

There are key dates to follow with respect to the DC Act in terms of notice periods and public documents. Staff have prepared the following timeline for information that will provide the required notices and disclosure requirements.

- Oct. 17: DC Background Study Public Release & 60-day circulation period (must be at least 60 days before by-law passage, and 2 weeks prior to public meeting – both requirements met)
- Oct. 17 & 24: Public Meeting notice provided in general circulation newspaper (Waterloo Chronicle)
- Oct. 21: DC Update Report to Council for information (CORP2019-070)
- Nov. 1: Draft DC By-law available on City website as indicated in Public Meeting notice
- Nov. 18: Formal Public Meeting (need at least 20 days notice in newspaper & study available at least 2 weeks prior – both requirements met)
- Dec. 16: Passage of DC by-law by Council
- Dec. 31: Implementation of new DC by-law and new rates take effect (new DC rate brochure to be available)
- TBD: Notice of DC by-law approval and time for appeal (Clerk to post notice not later than 20 days after the day the by-law is passed – appeal period is up to 40 days after the day the by-law is passed)

Summary:

The DC Background Study and draft by-law update process is moving towards completion. Various internal departments have contributed a significant amount of information to date, allowing the City's Consultant to prepare the Background Study document and draft by-law for Council's consideration. The City's external industry working group members have also been invaluable in providing input to City Staff on the various parameters within the Study.

Should Council direct Staff to migrate towards a different rate structure for apartment units, Staff would integrate this into the draft by-law for Council's consideration during the by-law approval report on December 16, 2019.
